Seperal Cassies M. Clay's Wedding to His

Fifteen-year-old Ward. The only witnesses to the marriage were McClelland Richardson and Dr. Cassius Clay Smith, the latter a physician of Richmond, Ky. Dr. Smith refused to say anything about the wedding, explaining that he had promised General Clay not to do so.

It was learned that the ceremony took place in the sitting room. The bride was not dressed as brides usually are. She wore a plain dark dress, was bareheaded, her long black tresses hanging in an almost disheveled mass down her back. She were no gloves, had no orange blossoms and carried no hride's roses in her hand. It was a simple ceremony. The girl, who had remained sitting until General Clay and the magistrate arose, got up from the divan and took her place beside her white headed bridegroom. It was a touching scene.

The man who had led admiring thousands in a crusade for human liberty, who in his youth was a perfect Apollo Belvidere in appearance, if not a Na-poleon in the cause of abolition, stood as meekly as a little child, with an expression of unspeakable happiness upon his time worn but still fresh and almost youthful features, and by his side that simple, trusting country girl, as shy as a gazelle, knowing as little of the great world in which her venerable husband had played so conspicuous a part as the most untutored daughter of nature The ceremony was very brief, and when it was over the bashful child went back to the kitchen, and General Clay and his family physician sat talking by the large open fireplace, in which glowed

And thus was celebrated one of the most remarkable weddings that ever took place in the United States .- Lon

Another story relates that the disappearance of some important paper from a pigeouhole at the war office was fre-quently noticed. After diligent search the document would be found in the precise place from which it had been abstracted. The general staff also is said to have been aware that the Ger man war office prided itself on its ini tiation into many of the secrets of the plan of mobilization. For a long time the French military authorities were puzzled, but eventually succeeded in unraveling the mystery. It will be quite another thing to prove who has en guilty of these acts of high treason

An Italian Game. A waveler describes a game which is popular with the children of Italy. It is very like one played by American shildren. In Italy the game is called counting the eggs, and is thus played: The children sit in a row on the grass with every pair of brown feet well in sight. The mother counts her eggseven the original documents were supthat is, the children's feet-and ther says: "Now, there are 16 eggs. Be sure fon don't eat any while I go to hurch." In her absence the children tack up a certain number of feet under their freeks and say, "What a long time mother is at church!" She coucounts the eggs and says: "Why, how is this? I left 16 and now there are only ten." The children answer that a wom an came while she was gone and offered four chickens for the six eggs, and they took her offer. "Where are the eggs?" asked the mother. "Down in the field," they reply. The mother goes to seek them, and no sooner is her back turned than all her children jamp and dance about, shouting, "We've eaten then ourselves," whereupon the mother has to catch them all and whip them. The ast one caught has to be the mother the

The pensants as sembled, gave chase to the tarantass, surrounded it and called out to the "cholers devil" to disappear. The poor woman said she was human like them selves and could not vanish miraculously, but they shouted, prayed and closed around. A few shots were heard, followed by a pitcons moan and then a deafening shout of triumph: "Pray to God, brothers, and thank him. We have killed the cholera." The woman's name was Kondratieff. Her corpse was sot allowed into the village. - London
